COUPLES ADDENDUM

There will be no automatic confidentiality between the parties. Should either member of the couple say anything to me when the other party is not present, it is understood that I may, at my discretion, inform the other party of this information. The first party will always be encouraged to inform the other party themselves, and intent to inform will always be discussed. This does not mean that all information revealed while only one partner is present will be revealed, only that in certain situations, especially where health and safety are involved, that it may occur. Also both parties agree that records for the couples's sessions will not be released to either spouse or to others unless required by law and that discussion with either party's attorney must be with the consent of both parties.

By signing below we are indicating that we have both read and understood this confidentiality addendum and agree to abide by it.
